Item 7.01 Regulation FD Disclosure.

On October 8, 2014, the Minnesota Supreme Court affirmed the decision of the Court of Appeals of the State of Minnesota (the "Appellate Court"), which had reinstated a $630.4 million final arbitration award previously issued against Western Digital Corporation (the "Company") in the arbitration between the Company and Seagate Technology, LLC ("Seagate"). In the 2011 arbitration, Seagate alleged, among other things, misappropriation of eight alleged trade secrets by the Company and a now former employee. In October 2012, the District Court of Hennepin County, Minnesota (the "District Court") confirmed the arbitration award with respect to each of the five trade secret claims that the Company and the former employee had won at the arbitration, and vacated the arbitration award and ordered a rehearing with respect to the three trade secret claims that the Company and the former employee had lost. Seagate appealed the District Court's decision to the Appellate Court and, in July 2013, the Appellate Court reversed the District Court's decision and remanded for entry of an order and judgment confirming the arbitration award. In October 2013, the Minnesota Supreme Court granted the Company's petition for review of the Appellate Court's decision.

The decision of the Minnesota Supreme Court affirming the Appellate Court's decision is not subject to appeal and, as a result, the Company expects to pay the $525 million arbitration award plus pre-award interest of $105.4 million, totaling $630.4 million, plus interest accrued on the principal amount of the award from January 24, 2012 through the date the award is paid. As of June 27, 2014, the Company had recorded an accrual of $758 million for this matter. The arbitration award will be paid by one of the Company's foreign subsidiaries using cash and cash equivalents held outside of the United States, and will not have any impact on the Company's operations.
